VIKRAM, THE WISE KING

A. Warmer

Have you ever attended a panchayat meeting in your village in connection with a quarrel ? If yes, who was the judge ? What judgement did he give ? What were the reactions of the other people present there ?

There was a king. His name was Vikram. He was very wise. He was a great judge. He was also very just and kind.

One day his officers brought two women to his court. They were Sita and Lila. They were quarrelling over a baby.

Sita Said, "The baby is mine. Lila has stolen the baby."

"No, the baby is mine. This woman is telling a lie," said Lila.

King Vikram heard the two women. He thought over the matter deeply. Then he ordered his officers to bring a sword.

The king said to one of his officers, "Divide the baby into two halves. Give one half to Sita and the other half to Lila".

Hearing this, Sita cried loudly, "No! No! My lord. Don't divide the baby into two halves. Give this baby to Lila. Let the baby live."

The King ordered his officers, "Give the baby to Sita. She is the real mother."

Everyone present at the court was surprised. They appreciated the wisdom of King Vikram.

E. Let's Learn

Look at the following sentences from the lesson :

- Divide the baby into two halves.
- Don't divide the baby into two halves.
- Give this to Lila.
- Let the baby live.

All these sentences express either an order, request, advice or proposal. Such sentences, as you can see, begin with the verb in the first form and the subject 'You' is dropped. These sentences are called imperative sentences.

Now, read the story and find which of them expresses an order, request, advice or proposal.

E.1. Now write imperative sentences for the following situations. One is done for you.

1. When you are thirsty.
Give me water.
2. When you ask someone not to do anything.
.....
3. When you want other's pen.
.....
4. When you want to help your friend.
.....

Ex. You are requested to help me.
Please help me.

1. You are requested to have a cup of tea.

2. You are requested to help the poor.

.....

3. You are requested to go there.

.....

4. You are requested to come here.

.....

5. You are requested to lend me some money.

E.3. Rewrite the following sentences as shown in the example.

Ex. You are prohibited from touching the fire.

Don't touch the fire.

1. You are prohibited from coming inside.

2. You are prohibited from teasing the dog.

.....

3. You are advised not to hate anyone.

.....

4. You are advised not to tell a lie.

.....

5. You are advised not to run in the sun.

.....

F.1. Let's Talk and Write

Should Lila be punished by the king or the king should set her free?
If you say 'Yes' explain 'why', but if you say 'No' explain. 'Why not'.

G. Let's Say Aloud

Say these words aloud

thought	theft	stump	stand
theme	think	stolen	stir
thin	throw	stone	sticker
thigh	throne	stop	steam

H. Let's Listen and Write

H.1. For the teacher : Select some of the sentences or a paragraph from the story and give a dictation to test children's spelling ability and enrich their writing ability.

I. Let's Play

Ladder Game

This game may be played between two groups or individuals.

The first participant shall speak out a word and the opposite participant has to speak out a new word starting with the last letter of that very word.

Example :
