Jamaican Fragment

Everyday, I walk a half-mile from my home to the tramcar lines in the morning and from the lines to my home in the evening. The walk is pleasant. The road on either side is flanked by red and green-roofed bungalows, green lawns and gardens. The exercise is good for me, and now and then, I learn something from a little incident. One morning, about half-way between my front gate and the tram track, I noticed two little boys playing in the garden of the more modest cottages. They were both very little boys, one was four years old perhaps, the other five. The bigger of the two was a sturdy youngster, very dark, with a mat of coarse hair on his head and coal-black eyes. He was definitely a little Jamaican — a strong little Jamaican. The other little fellow was smaller, but also sturdy — he was white, with hazel eyes and light-brown hair. Both were dressed in blue shirts and khaki pants. They wore no shoes and their feet were muddy. They were not conscious of my standing there, watching them; they played on. The game, if it could be called a game, was not elaborate. The little white boy strode imperiously up and down, and every now and then shouted imperiously at his bigger playmate. The little brown boy shuffled along quietly behind him and did what he was told.

'Pick up that stick!' The dark boy picked it up. 'Jump into the flowers!' The dark boy jumped.

'Get me some water!' The dark boy ran inside. The white boy sat down on the lawn.

I was amazed. Here before my eyes, a white baby, for they were little more than babies, was imposing his will upon a little black boy. And the little black boy submitted. I puzzled within myself as I went down the road. Could it be that the little dark boy was the son of a servant in the home and therefore had to do the white boy's bidding? No. They were obviously dressed alike, the little dark boy was of equal class with his playmate. No. They were playmates, the little dark boy was a neighbour's child. I was sure of that. Then how was it that he obeyed so faithfully the white boy's orders?

Was it that even as a boy he sensed that in his own country he would be at the white man's beck and call? Could he, at his age, divine a difference between himself and the white boy? And did the little white youngster, so young, such a baby, realize that he would grow to dominate the black man? Was there an indefinable quality in the white man that enabled his baby, smaller and younger than his playmate, to make him his slave? I could find no answer. I could not bring myself to believe such a thing, and yet, with my own eyes I had seen a little dark boy take orders from a little white boy — a little white boy, obviously his social equal, and younger and smaller. Were we, as a race, really inferior? So inferior that even in our infancy we realised our deficiencies, and accepted a position as the white man's servant?

For a whole day I puzzled over this problem. For a whole day my faith in my people was shaken. When I passed by that afternoon the little boys were not there. That evening I thought deeply on the subject.

The next morning the boys were there again, and a man was standing at the gate watching them. I stopped and looked, just to see what the white boy was making his little servant do. To my utter astonishment the little dark boy was striding imperiously up and down the lawn, while the white youngster walked abjectly behind him.

'Get me a banana!' The little boy ran into the house and reappeared shortly with a banana. 'Peel it for me!' the little white boy peeled the banana and handed it to his dark master.

I saw it now. It was indeed a game, a game I had played as a child. Each boy took it in turn every alternate day to be the boss, the other the slave. It had been great fun to me as a youngster. I smiled as I remembered. I looked at the man standing by the gate. He was a white man. I remembered what I had thought yesterday. He, no doubt, I thought to myself, was wondering if the black race is superior to the white. I laughed gently to myself. How silly grown-ups are, how clever we are, how wonderfully able we are, to impute deep motives to childish actions! This man, I said to myself, will puzzle all day on whether the blacks will eventually rise and rule the world because he sees a little black boy realizing at a tender age his superiority over the white. I will save him his puzzle. I will explain it to him. I went across to him.

'I know what you're thinking,' I said. 'You're thinking that may be the black race is superior to the white, because you just saw the little dark youngster on the lawn ordering the little white boy around. Don't think that; it's a game they play. Alternate days one is the boss, the other the servant. It's a grand game. I used to play it and may be so did you. Yesterday I saw the little white boy bossing the dark one and I worried all day over the dark boy's realisation of his inferiority so young in life! We are silly, we grown-ups, aren't we.'?

The man was surprised at my outburst. He looked at me smiling. 'I know all about the game,' he said. 'The boys are brothers — my sons.' He pointed to a handsome brown woman on the verandah who had just come out to call in the children. 'That's my wife', he said.

I smiled. My spirit laughed within me. This is Jamaica, I said in my heart, this is my country — my people. I looked at the white man. He smiled at me. 'We'll miss the tram if we don't hurry,' he said.

Comprehension

I. Answer the following questions.

- 'I puzzled within myself,' says the narrator. What conclusion did he come to after this puzzling thought?
- 'For a whole day my faith in my people was shaken.' What do you think was the writer's faith? Why was it shaken?
- Why did the game next morning astonish the author? What did he see ?

4. The second day, the narrator smiled as he remembered something. What made him laugh?

5. Read the following sentences from the first paragraph:

“...I noticed two little boys playing in the garden...”

“The game, if it could be called a game, was not elaborate.”

From these two sentences, we can understand that the writer knows it is a game, but then why was he puzzled?

6. If the writer had seen the second day's game on the first day, what would he have thought about it?

7. Why did the white man feel surprised at the narrator's outburst? Eventually, he also smiled. Why?

8. Did the white man believe in white supremacy? How do you know?

9. How did the narrator come to the conclusion that grown-ups are silly?

10. How did the story begin? How did the writer take the story forward?

What is the point of conflict? How did the story end?

What are the characters you empathize with?

Read the following sentences. Some of them are not in accordance with the story. Tick (✓) these sentences.

1. The narrator was worried that even a very young white boy commanded the older black boy which indicated racial domination.

2. The black boy played the role of the servant on both the days and followed his brother's commands meekly.

3. The white boy who was younger of the two played the role of the master and the older boy who was a black played the role of the servant on the first day.

4. The narrator observed two boys playing a game one day when he was going for an evening walk.

5. The little white boy commanded the black boy to perform a few tasks which the black boy did obediently.

II The following words/phrases describe the two boys in the story Jamaican Fragment.

four-year-old coarse hair five -year-old hazel eyes

- 1) Now look for the other words in the lesson that describe the two boys. Write your words in the appropriate column.

| The White Boy | The Black Boy |
|---------------|---------------|
| | |
| | |
| | |

- 2) Think of some other words that may be used to describe the characters of the white boy and the black boy.

III Read the following sentence.

The bigger of the two was a sturdy youngster, very dark, with a mat of coarse hair on his head and coal black eyes.

In the above sentence , the narrator described the hair and eyes of the boy in an effective way.

The expression 'a mat of coarse hair' is a metaphor.

A metaphor is a word / phrase used in an imaginative way to describe something or somebody in order to show that the two things have the same qualities and make the descriptions more effective.

Now the hair of the boy can also be described as the hair of the boy is like a mat.

A simile is a figure of speech that expresses the resemblance of one thing to another of a different category usually introduced by like, as... as.

A simile, like a metaphor, is also a comparison. The primary difference is that a simile contains the words like, as, as....as to compare two things while a metaphor simply suggests different (dissimilar) things as the same(similar).

Read the following paragraph and identify the similes and metaphors in it.

Sunitha was an exceptional student. She was good at sports and other co-curricular activities too. One day the teachers were talking about her. The maths teacher said fondly, "My Sunitha is the Shakuntala of our school." The science teacher said, "She is as clever as Kalpana Chawla and as hard working as Marie Curie. One day she will bring the Nobel prize to our country." The physical education teacher started singing the praises of Sunitha saying, "You know, she runs like a hare and swims like a fish. And in the boxing ring? She is a leopard. I must say she is the Mary Kom of our state." Unlike other teachers, the social studies teacher hated this girl as Sunitha belonged to the so-called 'lower caste'. She said, "Sunitha... a hare, a fish and ...what is that? ... a leopard. She is more an animal than a girl, I suppose." All other teachers said in unison, "Yes, she is an animal for animals that cannot understand the metaphor in a language."

IV. Prefixes and suffixes

Every language contains an enormous and ever-growing number of words. Enhancing your vocabulary by learning new words can be overwhelming, but if you know the common prefixes and suffixes of the language, you will understand many more words.

Mastering common prefixes and suffixes is like learning a code. Once you crack the code, you cannot only spell words correctly but also recognize and perhaps even define unfamiliar words.

Read the following sentences.

1. Was there an indefinable quality in the white man that enabled his baby...
2. The little boy ran into the house and reappeared shortly with a banana.

In the underlined words in the above sentences, ‘in -’ and ‘re-’ are prefixes, and ‘- able’ is a suffix.

Examples:

Prefixes : dis -----, mis-----, un-----, re-----, inter-----, pre-----

Suffixes : ----ness, ----able, ----ly, ----ous, ----ful, ----ment, ----ism, ----er, ----ing

Look at the following table and notice the example words formed with prefixes.

| Prefix | Meaning | Example |
|--------|-------------------|----------------------------------|
| dis | not, opposite of | dis + satisfied = dissatisfied |
| mis | wrongly | mis + spell = misspell |
| un | not | un + acceptable = unacceptable |
| re | again | re + election = reelection |
| inter | between | inter + related = interrelated |
| pre | before | pre + pay = prepay |
| non | not | non + sense = nonsense |
| super | above | super + script = superscript |
| sub | under | sub + merge = submerge |
| anti | against, opposing | anti + bacterial = antibacterial |

A few prefixes that give the meaning "no" or "not." are ..

| Prefix | Examples |
|--------|---------------------------|
| il- | illegal, illegitimate |
| im- | immoral, impossible |
| in- | inexpensive, incapable |
| ir- | irresponsible, irrelevant |
| un- | unhappy, unconditional |
| no- | nobody, nowhere |

- Prefixes change the meaning of words .
 - Some of the suffixes change the word class also, as in

A. Pick out words from the lesson that have either prefixes or suffixes or both.

B. Read the following passage and underline the words with prefixes and suffixes.

Improper garbage disposal can cause contamination of subterranean water sources. Relocating garbage dumps doesn't necessarily solve this unhealthy problem. Laws preceding the discovery of this problem were relaxed in terms of garbage disposal. Since the discovery, authorities have proceeded to toughen these laws and have injected funds into reevaluating ongoing practices. Environmental organizations have helped to convince the public of the depth of the problem and the need to recycle garbage. Some garbage dumps have receded in size, but most have increased as the unbelievable amount of garbage produced continues to multiply.

C. Insert the words in blanks with the appropriate prefixes or suffixes or both.

1. The rate of _____ in Brazil has been rising steadily. (employ)
2. Lenny looked funny in his _____ shirt and pants. (matched)
3. When my sister first saw the meteor, she thought it was an _____ phenomenon. (natural)
4. He was sitting _____ in his seat on the train. (comfort)
5. With a small class size, the students get to _____ with the teacher more frequently. (act)
6. I slipped on the ice because I did not heed the _____ about watching my step. (cautions)
7. The team that he supported were able to win the _____. (champion)
8. He decided to study _____ at a university. (journal)
9. I wanted to ease my stomach _____, so I drank some ginger root tea. (comfort)
10. She had no _____ of going to see him. (intend)

Grammar

I. The Simple Past and the Present Perfect

Look at the following sentence from the lesson, ‘Jamaican Fragment.’

The dark boy ran inside.

Now compare this sentence with the following sentence.

The dark boy has run inside.

Both the sentences express a past action. But in the first sentence the speaker is interested in the action itself whereas in the second sentence the speaker is thinking of the effect of the past action on the present .

The first sentence is in the simple past tense and the second sentence is in the present perfect.

Uses of the simple past tense:

1) The simple past is used to refer to past actions or events.

Examples:

- a) He passed his examination in 2013.
- b) I visited Delhi last month.
- c) Raju met his friend yesterday.

2) The simple past form can also be used to refer to the present time. This is a special use of the simple past form with verbs like want, wonder, hope, think to make an utterance more polite or tactful.

Examples:

- a) I wanted to discuss my proposal with you, madam.
- b) I wondered if I could discuss my proposal with you, sir.
- c) I thought of discussing my proposal with you, sir.
- d) I hoped to discuss my proposal with you, sir.

Other Uses of the Simple Past Form

1) After the conditional if to indicate tentativeness (hypothetical) e.g. If I were the Prime Minister, I would provide free education at all levels.

2) After it's time, would rather, wish e.g. It's 10 o'clock---it's time you went to bed.

3) In reported speech

e.g. I asked you what the time was.

The present perfect

The present perfect (has/have + Verb in the past participle form) refers to actions in the past which have no definite time reference. The present perfect in English is used in the following three situations:

1. The present perfect tense is often used to talk about past actions and events which are completely finished. However, instead of the simple past, the present perfect is used if the action has current relevance, that is, it is related to the speaker's experience. In this case even though the actions took place in the past, they are still with the speaker, as part of his/her experience and knowledge. This use of the present perfect is therefore also called the experiential use of the present perfect.

e.g. I have seen the Taj Mahal.

(Meaning: I know the Taj Mahal. It is still fresh in my memory.)

(Contrast: I saw the Taj Mahal two years ago.)

2. To indicate an action/situation which began in the past and which has continued up to the present moment, i.e. the moment when we are speaking, the present perfect tense is used.

e.g. I have lived in Hyderabad for 10 years.

(Meaning: I started living in Hyderabad 10 years ago and I am still living in Hyderabad.)
If you wish to state that you still continue to live in Hyderabad you should say, 'I have been living in Hyderabad for 10 years'.

This use of the present perfect is also known as its linking use as it links the past with the present.

3. The present perfect is also used to refer to past actions/events whose results are seen in the present, i.e. when there is evidence in the present for some action/event that happened in the past. Hence, it is also called the evidential use of the present perfect. This is called resultative past.

e.g. It has rained! (evidence-Look! The ground is wet.)

The following examples make the difference clear:

1. I saw the film, Gandhi last March. (Here the speaker is calling attention to the action of seeing and to the time when it happened.)
2. I have seen the film, Gandhi. (Here the speaker is not saying when he saw the film. He is calling attention to the fact that he is now a person with personal experience of the film or someone who can tell us about it.)

3. I cut my finger when I was sharpening the pencil. (Nothing is said about any result now.)

4. I have cut my finger (and it is bleeding now.)

The simple past is often used with adverbs of past time (e.g. yesterday, two months ago, in June, in 1965, during the war).

Sometimes it is also used to refer to present time or future time actions.

e.g., 1. Sir ,may I come in. I wanted to talk to you.

2. If you left for Delhi tomorrow,when would you return?

The present perfect is never used with adverbs of past time. You should not say, for example, 'She has gone to Hyderabad yesterday'. Say either 'She went to Hyderabad yesterday', if you are interested in the action and in the time when it happened, or 'She has gone to Hyderabad', if you wish to convey the idea that she is not in the town now.

The present perfect can be used with adverbs of present time (e.g. today, this morning, this week, this month).

Ex. I have seen Raju this week.

The present perfect is also used with just, recently, yet, already, never, ever, often, so far, etc.

Ex. They have just gone.

Ex. Has Anirudh left yet ?

Read the following sentences .Complete the conversations with the appropriate forms of the verbs. Then say why you chose simple past/present perfect forms.

1. "Is your brother in?"

"No, he isn't. He _____ (go) to Chennai."

"When _____ he _____ (go) to Chennai?"

"Yesterday."

2. "I _____ (lose) my pencil. _____ you _____ (see) it anywhere?"

"No, I _____. When _____ you last _____ (use) the pencil?"

"I _____ (use) it when I was in the class."

"Perhaps you _____ (leave) it in the class."

3. A: _____ Madhu _____ (not arrive) yet ?

B: No, he _____ .

C: But he _____ (arrive) already!

B: _____ you _____ (talk) to him?

C: No, I _____. I merely _____ (see) him.

B: That cannot be Madhu. He may have been somebody else.

4. A: _____ you _____ (call) me, mother?

B: Yes, I _____. _____ you _____ (see) my diary today?

I _____ (put) it on the table last night. I _____ (look) all over the house for it. But I _____ (not, find) it anywhere.

A: I _____ (see) it on the table this morning, if I remember right. Maybe father _____ (take) it with him by mistake.

5. "Do you know Mrs. Geetha ?"

"Yes, I do. I _____ (know) her for nearly four years. It _____ (be) at a High School that I first _____ (see) her in 2009. I _____ (work) with her for several years. Recently we _____ (meet) at the wedding of a mutual friend of us."

II . Punctuation: hyphen (-) and dash (—)

Look at the following sentence paying attention to the use of the hyphen and the dash.

1. The other little fellow was smaller, but also sturdy — he was white, with hazel eyes and light-brown hair.

2. 'He was definitely a little Jamaican — a strong little Jamaican.'

As you know, a dash is longer than a hyphen. It is almost double the size of a hyphen. It is used to give additional information, to indicate added emphasis, an interruption, or an abrupt change of thought.

In the above sentence 1, the dash is used to give important additional information about the white boy. Dashes are used to give very important additional information. They are also used to emphasise certain aspects of what was said earlier. For example, in the sentence 2, 'He was definitely a little Jamaican — a strong little Jamaican.', the phrase after the dash emphasizes what was said about the Jamaican by adding another dimension 'strength' and by repeating the phrase 'a little Jamaican'. This can also be said without using the dash like this: 'He was definitely a strong little Jamaican', but the expression with the dash is more effective since the dash breaks the thought of the reader and then draws his/her attention to the phrase that follows it.

From the story, pick out 5 sentences with a dash or a set of commas. Discuss the function of the dash /set of commas in each of them. In each case, substitute the commas with a dash or the other way round to observe the change in meaning.

Writing

I. Discuss in groups and write an essay on the 'Violation of Child Rights in Indian Society' based on your experiences / reading.

The following points may help you.

- What are the child rights?
- How are they violated?

- Reasons for violation
- Measures to be taken to prevent child rights violation
- Conclusion

Remember the following points.

- Collect ideas on the given theme.
- Sequence the ideas.
- Maintain coherence and cohesion.
- Use appropriate linkers.
- Give your point of view.

- how to end bias towards girls

Remember the following points while delivering the speech:

- Maintain appropriate posture
- Modulate your voice using stress, pause and intonation.
- Use appropriate gestures and facial expressions.
- Maintain eye contact with the audience.

B Reading

Once upon a Time

Once upon a time, son,
they used to laugh with their hearts and laugh with their eyes:
but now they only laugh with their teeth,
while their ice-block-cold eyes search behind my shadow.

There was a time indeed
they used to shake hands with their hearts:
but that's gone, son.

Now they shake hands without hearts:
while their left hands search my empty pockets.

'Feel at home'! 'Come again':
they say, and when I come again and feel
at home, once, twice,
there will be no thrice -
for then I find doors shut on me.

So I have learned many things, son.

I have learned to wear many faces like dresses - home face,
office face, street face, host face, cocktail face, with all their conforming smiles like a fixed portrait smile.

And I have learned too to laugh with only my teeth and shake hands without my heart.

I have also learned to say, 'Goodbye',
when I mean 'Good-riddance';
to say 'Glad to meet you', without being glad; and to say 'It's been nice talking to you', after being bored.

But believe me, son.

I want to be what I used to be when I was like you. I want to unlearn all these muting things.

Most of all, I want to relearn how to laugh, for my laugh in the mirror shows only my teeth like a snake's bare fangs !

So show me, son,
how to laugh; show me how
I used to laugh and smile
once upon a time when I was like you.

What Is My Name?

Have you noticed how your father calls your mother? Does he use her name or not? How do the neighbours address her? Does anyone address her by name? What about your grandmother? In this story, P. Sathyavathi describes how a woman forgets her own name since no one addresses her by name. How does a woman gain her identity—by name, by marriage, by motherhood, by education, by profession or by anything else? Read the story keeping these questions in mind.

A young woman, before being a housewife. A woman, educated and cultured, and intelligent, and capable, quick-witted, with a sense of humour and elegance.

Falling for her beauty and intelligence, as also the dowry which her father offered, a young man tied the three sacred knots around her neck, made her the housewife to a household and said to her, 'Look, ammadu, this is your home.' Then the housewife immediately pulled the end of her sari and tucked it in at the waist and swabbed the entire house and decorated the floor with muggulu designs. The young man promptly praised her work. 'You are dexterous at swabbing the floor — even more dexterous in drawing the muggulu. Sabash, keep it up.' He said it in English, giving her a pat on the shoulder in appreciation. Overjoyed, the housewife began living with swabbing as the chief mission in her life. She scrubbed the house spotlessly clean at all times and beautifully decorated it with multi-coloured designs. That's how her life went on, with a sumptuous and ceaseless supply of swabbing cloths and muggu baskets.

But one day while scrubbing the floor, the housewife suddenly asked herself, 'What is my name?' The query shook her up. Leaving the mopping cloth and the muggu basket there itself, she stood near the window scratching her head, lost in thoughts. 'What is my name — what is my name?' The house across the road carried a name-board, Mrs M Suhasini, M.A., Ph.D., Principal, 'X' College. Yes, she too had a name as her neighbour did — 'How could I forget like that? In my scrubbing zeal I have forgotten my name — what shall I do now?' The housewife was perturbed. Her mind became totally restless. Somehow she finished her daubing for the day.

Meanwhile, the maidservant arrived. Hoping at least she would remember, the housewife asked her, 'Look, ammayi, do you know my name?'

'What is it, amma?' said the girl. 'What do we have to do with names of mistresses?' You are only a mistress to us — the mistress of such and such a white-storeyed house, ground floor means you.'

'Yes, true, of course, how can you know, poor thing?' thought the housewife.

The children came home from school for lunch in the afternoon. 'At least the children might remember my name' — the housewife hoped.

'Look here, children, do you know my name?' she asked.

They were taken aback.

'You are amma — your name is amma only — ever since we were born we have known only this, the letters that come are only in father's name — because everyone calls him by his name we know his name — you never told us your name — you don't even get letters addressed to your name,' the children said plainly. 'Yes, who will write letters to me?' Father and mother are there but they only make phone calls once in a month or two. Even my sisters are immersed with swabbing their houses. Even if they met me in some marriage or kumkum ceremony, they chatted away their time talking about new muggulu or new dishes to cook, but no letters!' The housewife was disappointed and grew more restless — the urge to know her own name somehow or the other grew stronger in her.

Now a neighbour came to invite her to a kumkum ceremony. The housewife asked her neighbour hoping she at least would remember her name. Giggling, the lady said, 'Somehow or other I haven't asked your name nor have you told me. Right -hand side, white storeyed - house or there she is, that pharmaceutical company manager's wife, if not that, that fair and tall lady, that's how we refer to you, that's all.' That's all that the other housewife could say.

It's no use. What can even my children's friends say — they know me only as Kamala's mother or some aunty, now my respected husband — is the only hope — if anyone remembers it, it is only he.

During the night meal, she asked him, 'Look here, I have forgotten my name — if you remember it, will you please tell me?'

The respected husband burst out laughing and said, 'What is it, dear, never has it happened before, you are talking about your name today. Ever since we were married I have got used to calling you only as yemoi. You too never told me not to address you that way because you have a name of your own — what's happened now — Everyone calls you Mrs Murthy, don't they?'

'Not Mrs Murthy, I want my own name — what shall I do now?' she said in anguish.

'What's there, you choose a new name, some name or other,' the husband advised.

'Very nice — your name is Satyanarayana Murthy; will you keep quiet if I ask you to change your name to Siva Rao or Sundara Rao? I want my name only,' she said.

'It's all right, you are an educated woman — your name must be on the certificates — don't you have that much common sense — go and find out,' he advised her .

The housewife searched frantically for her certificates in the almirah — pattu saris, chiffon saris, handloom saris, voile saris, matching blouses, petticoats, bangles, beads, pearls, pins, kumkum barinas, silver plates, silver containers to keep sandalwood paste, ornaments all things arranged in an orderly fashion. Nowhere could she find her certificates. Yes — after marriage she had never bothered to carry those certificates here.

'Yes — I haven't brought them here — I shall go to my place, search for my certificates and enquire about my name, and return in a couple of days.' She asked for her husband's permission. 'Very nice! Must you go just for your name or what? If you go, who will scrub the house these two days?' said her lord. Yes, that was true — because she scrubbed better than the others, she had not allowed anyone else to do that job all these days. Everyone was busy with their own respective duties. He had his office — poor things, the children had their studies to take care of. Why should they bother about this chore, and she had been doing it all along — they just didn't know how to do it, of course.

But still, how to live without knowing one's name? It was all right all these days since the question had not occurred to her; now it was really hard to live without a name.

'Just for two days you manage somehow or other — until and unless I go and get my name, I shall find it difficult to live,' she pleaded with her husband and managed to get out of the house.

'Why, dear daughter, have you come so suddenly? Are your children and husband all right? Why have you come alone?'

Behind affectionate enquiries of the father and the mother there was a strain of suspicion. Recollecting immediately the purpose of her visit, the housewife asked her mother most pitifully, 'Amma, tell me, what is my name?'

'What is it amma, you are our elder daughter. We gave you education up to B.A. and got you married with fifty thousand rupees as dowry. We took care of your two deliveries — each time we alone bore the expenses of the maternity home. You have two children — your husband has a good job — a very nice person, too — your children are well-mannered.'

'It's not my history, amma — it's my name I want. At least tell me where my certificates are.'

'I don't know, child. Recently we cleaned out the almirah of old papers and files and arranged some glassware in their place. Some important files we kept in the attic — we shall search for them tomorrow. Now what is the hurry, don't worry about them — take a good bath and have your meal, child,' said the housewife's mother.

The housewife took a good bath and ate her meal, but she could not sleep. While scrubbing the house, humming happily, joyously, and making muggulu, she had never thought that she would have to face so many difficulties like this by forgetting her own name.

Dawn broke, but the search for the certificates among the files in the attic had not ended.

Now the wife asked everyone she met — she asked the trees — the anthills — the pond — the school where she had studied — the college. After all the shouting and the wailing, she met a friend — and succeeded in recovering her name.

That friend was also like her — married, and a housewife like her, but she had not made swabbing the sole purpose of her life; scrubbing was only a part of her life; she remembered her name and the names of her friends. This particular friend recognized our housewife.

'Sarada! My dear Sarada!' she shouted and embraced her. The housewife felt like a person — totally parched and dried up, about to die of thirst — getting a drink of cool water from the new earthen kooja poured into her mouth with a spoon and given thus a new life. The friend did indeed give her a new life — 'You are Sarada. You came first in our school in the tenth class. You came first in the music competition conducted by the college. You used to paint good pictures too. We were ten friends altogether — I meet all of them some time or other. We write letters to each other. Only you have gone out of our reach! Tell me why are you living incognito?' her friend confronted her.

'Yes, Pramila — what you say is true. Of course I'm Sarada — until you said it I could not remember it — all the shelves of my mind were taken up with only one thing — how well I can scrub the floors. I remembered nothing else. Had I not met you, I would have gone mad,' said the housewife named Sarada.

Sarada returned home, climbed the attic and fished out her certificates, the pictures she had drawn — old albums, everything she succeeded in getting out. She also searched further and managed to find the prizes she had received in school and college.

Overjoyed, she returned home.

'You have not been here — look at the state of the house — it's like a choultry. Oh what a relief you are here, now it is like a festival for us,' said Sarada's husband.

'Just scrubbing the floor does not make a festival. By the way, from now onwards don't call me yemoi geemoi. My name is Sarada — call me Sarada, understood?

Having said that, she went inside, humming joyously.

Sarada who had always cared so much for discipline, keeping an eye on every corner, checking if there was dust, making sure things were properly arranged each in its correct and respective order, now sat on the sofa which had not been dusted for the last two days. She sat there showing the children an album of her paintings that she had brought for them.

Centre's Nod to Kasturi Rangan Committee Recommendations on Western Ghats

NEW DELHI : The Ministry of Environment has accepted the report made by the Kasturi Rangan Committee on the conservation of Western Ghats. The committee, in its recommendations, made it clear that no further development activities be undertaken in the Western Ghats spread across the 60 thousand square kilometers in six states. The committee was appointed by the Union Government and headed by Kasturi Rangan to suggest measures to conserve the rarest eco system of the Western Ghat forests. The committee submitted its Report on 15th of April. The Ministry of Environment, after taking opinions of the six state governments and the people of the states, accepted the recommendations. The Western Ghats extend in Gujarat, Maharashtra, Goa, Karnataka, Kerala and Tamil Nadu states.

Unit 1

Texts for Listening

Attitude Is Everything

There was a farmer in Africa who was happy and content. He was happy because he was content. He was content because he was happy. One day a wise man came to him and told him about the glory of diamonds and the power that goes along with them. The wise man said, "If you had a diamond the size of your thumb, you could have your own city. If you had a diamond the size of your fist, you could probably own your own country." And then he went away. That night the farmer couldn't sleep.

He was unhappy and he was discontent. He was unhappy because he was discontent and discontent because he was unhappy. The next morning he made arrangements to sell off his farm, took care of his family and went in search of diamonds. He looked all over Africa and couldn't find any. He looked all through Europe and couldn't find any. When he got to Spain, he was emotionally, physically and financially broke. He got so disheartened that he threw himself into the Barcelona River and committed suicide.

Back home, the person who had bought his farm was watering the camels at a stream that ran through the farm. Across the stream, the rays of the morning sun hit a stone and made it sparkle like a rainbow. He thought it would look good on the mantel piece. He picked up the stone and put it in the living room. That afternoon the wise man came and saw the stone sparkling. He asked, "Is Hafiz back?" The new owner said, "No, why do you ask?" The wise man said, "Because that is a diamond. I recognize one when I see one." The man said, "No, that's just a stone I picked up from the stream. Come, I'll show you. There are many more." They went and picked some samples and sent them for analysis. Sure enough, the stones were diamonds. They found that the farm was indeed covered with acres and acres of diamonds.

Unit 2

Bus 65

A woman was visiting Hyderabad for the first time. She wanted to see the Charminar. Unfortunately, she couldn't find it, so she asked a police officer for directions.

"Excuse me, officer, how do I get to the Charminar?"

The officer replied, "Wait here at this bus stop for the number 65 bus. It'll take you right there." She thanked the officer and he drove off.

Three hours later the police officer returned to the same area and, sure enough, the woman was still waiting at the same bus stop. The officer got out of his car and said, "Excuse me, but to get to the Charminar, I said to wait here for the number 65 bus. That was three hours ago. Why are you still waiting?"

The woman replied, "Don't worry, officer, it won't be long now. The 56th bus just went by!"

Unit 3

Once there was a very rich man. His name was Dhanaraju. He had two sons, Ganiraju and Pothuraju. Ganiraju was hard working and obedient. He always helped his father in the fields. But Pothuraju was lazy. He never went to fields. He was disobedient to his father. He always wanted to lead a free, lavish life, so one day he said to his father, "Father, give me my share of property." The father was heart-broken. He divided the property between his two sons. Pothuraju left home with his share. He went to a distant land, made a lot of friends and soon spent all his property lavishly on friends, food and drinks. All his friends left him.

At that time, there was a famine and Pothuraju had no work and food. None of his friends gave him food or money. He took up the job of feeding pigs. Sometimes, he had to eat the food kept for the pigs. He was very sad about his condition. He soon began to think of his father and his brother. He said to himself, "In my father's house, even the servants have enough food. They get good shelter too. But here, I am struggling for food and shelter. I will go back to my father. I will beg him to take me as his servant."

So decided, the dishonest son set out for his father's house. In the meantime, his father was always thinking of his second son. He would sit near the windows. He would look out at the road, expecting his son to return home.

One day Dhanaraju saw his son coming at a distance. He ran out of the house in great joy and hugged his son. His son knelt down. He said, "Father, I am not fit to be your son. Take me as your servant."

Unit 4

Jewels of India

This is All India Radio, Hyderabad.

Welcome to 'Jewels of India Programme' presented by Meenakshi.

In our programme today, we will know about the most famous Indian film maker.

We know that Bengal is a beehive of cultural activities. It has witnessed cultural reforms. It is the birth place of many writers and intellectuals.

To Continue this tradition, another great son of India took birth in Calcutta on 2nd May 1921. Who could that be? It is none other than Satyajit Ray, the son of a writer... a grandson of an amateur astronomer. His home provided him with an ambience to think and feel.

Graduating from Presidency College, Calcutta, Ray moved to the open air university, 'Shantiniketan'. A keen observer that he was, Ray imbibed the spirit of Shantiniketan. There he read extensively and developed interest in painting.

Back in Calcutta, Ray started working for a London-based advertising firm. Wasn't it a right place for a creative man like Ray? He worked there for some time and moved to London to work there.

There he watched films. Film after film. He liked the film 'Bicycle Thieves'. That kindled interest in Young Ray in film-making. Slowly his interest led him to a world of creativity. That was the birth of a great film maker. And Ray became a film maker.

His films 'Pather Panchali', 'Aparajito', 'Agantuk' were some of his master pieces. His vision for Bengali films was matchless.

Along with the Oscar Award, he received the Bharata Ratna. The legendary film maker passed away in 1992. But the film world cherishes his memories forever.

Next week we will know about another great personality.

Till then, good bye to Meenakshi.

Unit 5

A Speech by Martin Luther King Jr.

I say to you today, my friends, that in spite of the difficulties and frustrations of the moment, I still have a dream. It is a dream deeply rooted in the American dream.

I have a dream that one day this nation will rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed: "We hold these truths to be self-evident; that all men are created equal."

I have a dream that one day on the red hills of Georgia the sons of former slaves and the sons of former slave owners will be able to sit down together at the table of brotherhood.

I have a dream that one day even the state of Mississippi, a desert state sweltering with the heat of injustice and oppression, will be transformed into an oasis of freedom and justice.

I have a dream that my four little children will one day live in a nation where they will not be judged by the colour of their skin but by the content of their character.

I have a dream today.

I have a dream that one day the state of Alabama, whose governor's lips are presently dripping with the words of interposition and nullification, will be transformed into a situation where little black boys and black girls will be able to join hands with little white boys and white girls and walk together as sisters and brothers.

I have a dream today.

I have a dream that one day every valley shall be exalted, every hill and mountain shall be made low, the rough places will be made plains and the crooked places will be made straight, and the glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together.

This is our hope. This is the faith with which I return to the south. With this faith we will be able to hew out of the mountain of despair a stone of hope. With this faith we will be able to transform the jangling discords of our nation into a beautiful symphony of brotherhood. With this faith we will be able to work together, to pray together, to struggle together, to go to jail together, to stand up for freedom together, knowing that we will be free one day.

Unit 6

A Talk by an Environmentalist

As you all know, to the North of India we have snow-covered mountain ranges as boundaries to our country. They are the Himalayas. You know the Himalayas are also affected by the environmental pollution. You must be wondering as to how the Himalayas get affected. The Himalayas are huge, cool ice formations surrounded by beautiful habitation. Do you know what happens if the Himalayas die? The whole of India will turn into a desert. Can you guess what felling of trees lead to? It leads to deforestation. Specially in the Himalayan region if the trees in the forest are cut down that will give way for warming of the atmosphere and with the result melting of Himalayas.

Do you know when the movement for the protection of Himalayas started? It started way back in 1970s and 1980s. The movement was for the resistance to the destruction of forests throughout India. Later it became organized and known as Chipko movement.

The architect of the movement to protect Himalayas is a renowned person - Sunderlal Bahuguna. He was the follower of Mahatma Gandhi in many ways. He started the movement to resist the destruction of forests in the Himalayan region.

Do you know how the movement got its name? The name (Chipko) came from a word meaning 'embrace'. In the movement, the villagers hugged the trees and thus saved them by putting their bodies in the way of the contractors' axes.

Unit 7

A Speech by A.P.J. Andul Kalam

Dear friends,

"I have three visions for India. In 3000 years of our history, people from all over the world have come and invaded us, captured our lands, conquered our minds. From Alexander onwards, the Greeks, the Turks, the Moguls, the Portuguese, the British, the French , the Dutch , all of them came and looted us, took over what was ours. Yet we have not done this to any other nation. We have not conquered anyone. We have not grabbed their land, their culture, their history and tried to enforce our way of life on them. Why? Because we respect the freedom of others.

That is why my first vision is that of freedom. I believe that India got its first vision of this in 1857, when we started the war of independence. It is this freedom that we must protect and nurture and build on. If we are not free, no one will respect us. My second vision for India is development. For fifty years we have been a developing nation. It is time we saw ourselves as a developed nation. We are among top 5 nations of the world in terms of GDP. We have 10 percent growth rate in most areas. Our poverty levels are falling. Our achievements are being globally recognized today. Yet we lack the self confidence to see ourselves as a developed nation, self-reliant and self-assured. Isn't this incorrect?

I have a third vision. India must stand up to the world because I believe that unless India stands up to the world, no one will respect us. Only strength respects strength. We must be strong not only as a military power but also as an economic power. Both must go hand-in-hand . My good fortune was to have worked with three great minds. Dr. Vikram Sarabhai of the Dept. of Space, Prof. Satish Dhawan, who succeeded him and Dr. Brah Prakash, father of nuclear material. I was lucky to have worked with all three of them closely and consider this the great opportunity of my life...

Why is the media here so negative? Why are we in India so embarrassed to recognize our own strengths, our achievements? We are such a great nation. We have so many amazing success stories but we refuse to acknowledge them. Why? We are the first in milk production. We are number one in Remote sensing satellites. We are the second largest producer of wheat and rice. Look at Dr. Sudarshan, he has transformed the tribal village into a self-sustaining, self driving unit. There are millions of such achievements but our media is only obsessed with failures and disasters...

Unit 8

Maya

My name is Maya. I was born 14 years ago in a poor peasant family. There were already many children, so when I was born no one was happy.

When I was still very little, I learned to help my mother and elder sisters with the domestic chores. I swept floors, washed clothes, and carried water and fire-wood. Some of my friends played outside, but I could not join them.

I was very happy when I was allowed to go to school. I made new friends there. I learned to read and write. But when I reached the fourth grade, my parents stopped my education. My father said there was no money to pay the fees. Also, I was needed at home to help my mother and the others.

If I were a boy, my parents would have let me complete school. My elder brother finished school and now works in an office in the capital. Two of my younger brothers go to school. Maybe they, too, will finish.

I know I shall have to spend long hours working either at home or in the field. And then I'll be married. I have seen my mother working from early dawn to late at night. My life will not be much different.

If I were given the choice of being born again, I would prefer to be a boy.

Appendix II

A Note to the Teacher

'Our World through English' Class X has been prepared in accordance with the syllabus for a ten-year course in English as a second language. We hope you would supplement this textbook with some other material of your choice for effective classroom transaction.

Teachers should promote interactive mode while transacting the language activities in each unit. They should act as facilitators and encourage children to do individual and group work, thus making them autonomous users of the language.

The Goals

After the completion of the course, the students are expected

- to attain the basic proficiency, such as is acquired in natural language learning i.e., the spontaneous and appropriate use of language for at least everyday use,
- to develop his/her linguistic competence for abstract thought and knowledge acquisition and,
- to construct discourses (oral and written) such as narratives, descriptions, essays, conversations, diary, plays, script writing, profile writing, dramas, posters, slogans, letters, etc.

Learning Outcomes / Academic Standards

At the end of the academic year the children are expected to achieve certain academic standards. The everyday classroom transaction should focus on the following areas.

1. Listening and Speaking
2. Reading Comprehension
3. Vocabulary
4. Grammar
5. Conventions of Writing
6. Creative Expression (Oral and Written Discourses)

In order to achieve the above learning outcomes, the new textbooks have eight units with different themes and genres.

Features of the Textbook

You may have noticed that this textbook has a few features which make it different from the ones that we used earlier.

- Units are thematically organized with passages meant for listening and reading. Activities focus on reading comprehension, vocabulary, grammar and study skills.
- Measures have been taken to help learners get the rules familiarised with different genres such as narratives, essays, biographical sketches, plays, poems, etc. and construct them in oral as well as written forms.
- Though the components in a unit have been organised as listening, speaking (oral activity), reading and writing, an integrated treatment of these skills has been worked out.
- Vocabulary and grammar exercises have been contextually designed.
- A few questions and activities, given under comprehension, do not target any fixed responses; instead, they demand the learners to use language authentically both orally and in writing. These comprehension questions and the language activities are merely stepping stones for the learners to gain proficiency in the language and as such are not goals by themselves.

Components of a Unit

Face Sheet / Trigger: Each unit starts with a picture / quotation / poem followed by some interactive questions. This is to warm-up the students and to generate genuine interest towards the theme and the reading texts in the unit. The teacher can put more number of questions that demand divergent responses from children in order to encourage them to interact more effectively.

Reading Texts: Every unit consists of three reading texts (Reading A, B and C). The reading texts include different genres such as stories, narratives, biographical sketches, short plays, speeches, monologues, letters, interviews and essays related to the theme of the unit. All texts are followed by glossary, and a few comprehension questions. You will find the questions that help students think critically, reflect on what they have read, and interpret the text in their own words. Teachers should follow the suggested transaction process in the classroom.

Language Activities

Vocabulary: This section contains some vocabulary tasks/activities/exercises. You will find matching questions, finding synonyms / antonyms, phrasal verbs, multiple shades of meanings, collocations, homonyms, homophones, homographs, idioms, word-formation activities, etc.

Grammar: This section contains some grammar tasks/activities/exercises. You will find tasks that make the students explore the language. You will also find activities that help students identify grammatical errors and edit them.

Writing: This section contains some written discourses that help students write conversations, descriptions, narratives / stories, messages, e-mails, SMSes, diary entries, letters, paragraph, an essays, biographical sketches, songs / poems and some other discourses. You will also find some tasks that need group discussion, collation of information from various sources, and then writing a piece collaboratively.

Study Skills: This section contains some tasks/activities/exercises to improve study skills. You will find some verbal and nonverbal activities like pie charts, bar diagrams, tables, advertisements, dictionary entries, route maps, etc. These activities help children interpret, analyze and transfer the data, and use the language appropriately.

Listening: This section contains a listening text (given in Appendix-I) and a few tasks/activities/exercises to improve speaking and listening competencies. You will find some listening comprehension questions, and questions that call for the students' reflection on what they have listened to.

Oral Activity: This section contains some oral discourses to improve speaking competencies. In this section you will find some oral activities that encourage the children to participate in the conversations, discussions, debates, compering, presenting reports, speeches, etc.

Project: This section contains one or two projects related to the theme of the unit. They require students to find resources, to work out the task i.e. collection, analysis and interpretation of data, to prepare a report and to present their findings before the class.

Self-Assessment Checklist: The checklist given at the end of each unit helps the learner to assess his / her own learning. The self-assessment tools reflect all the sections in a unit. This check list also helps the teacher to assess the learning levels of children.

The Methods

Unless we clearly understand the concept of language and the process of language acquisition, we will not be able to identify the right kind of pedagogy for second languages. If we equate information to knowledge of language and assume that learners are destined to receive this information, we will focus on how the information given in the course books can be transmitted. On the other hand, if we believe that knowledge of a language is different from information about a language, and that every child constructs this knowledge through interpreting the world around her/him, we will define this knowledge unambiguously and will identify the process by which it is constructed.

The Classroom Process

The general design of classroom transaction shall be as suggested below:

The Pre-Reading

1. The teacher interacts with the learners in an informal way in order to instil in them a sort of communication expectancy so that they are psychologically tuned to involve in the activities that follow. This can be done based on something (say a photograph, a visual clipping, a news report, etc.) that will work as a trigger for sensitizing the learners on the theme around which the entire classroom activities are woven. The facilitator can ask a few analytical questions that will elicit individual perceptions on the trigger.
2. The facilitator presents a narrative or initiates a discussion that will further sensitize the learners on the theme.
3. This is followed by a few more analytical questions eliciting free responses of the learners. These questions will help the learners make intelligent predictions on what they are going to read.

Reading

This involves a number of micro-processes:

1. Individual reading: Note that children have already made some intelligent predictions on the content of the passage. They will be making an earnest attempt to check whether their prediction is borne out true. Reading in this sense is need-based and is an intrinsically motivated activity. Of course they will be confronted with a few barriers - barriers caused by the unfamiliar words or structural complexities.
2. Collaborative reading: Children sit in groups and share within the group their reading experience in terms of things like the following:
 - What they understood from the passage which they have read;
 - What they did not understand and
 - The parts that they liked most in the passage.
3. This is followed by sharing of ideas with other groups with the facilitator's mediation. Sometimes, a glossary or dictionary will be made use of.
4. When collaborative reading is over, the facilitator asks a few questions related to the passage. These are not meant for checking comprehension. Instead, they are questions of an analytical nature such as reflective questions, inferential questions, and so on.

These questions help the learners assimilate the text by virtue of personalising and localising it.

5. The facilitator can read the passage aloud which will help the learners make better sense of the reading passage with proper voice modulation. Moreover, the teacher's reading will serve as a listening input for the learners in terms of some of the articulatory features(eg.stress, pause, etc).
6. A mind mapping activity may be carried out as a tool for tracking the thinking process of the learners. They can describe the mind maps they have developed.

The Post Reading Session

The major activity of the post-reading session is construction of a discourse by the learners. By virtue of the inputs they have received through listening and reading, they are in a position to take up a task which demands them to construct a specific discourse (conversation, description, story, etc.). Each discourse calls for a specific process without which the learners will not be able to construct it. The micro-processes of discourse construction are:

- interaction /brainstorming to sensitize the learners towards the features / ideas of a discourse;
- individual construction
- presentation by a few individuals
- constructive feedback by the facilitator and other learners
- sharing in groups for refinement
- presentation by groups
- presentation of the facilitator's version of the targeted discourse and
- sensitizing the learners n the the discourse features of the ideal version

Editing

The discourses constructed by the learners (whether individually or in groups) may have certain errors in them. These errors may be related to syntax or morphology or cutting across both. In addition to these, there may be punctuation or spelling errors. These are to be rectified for which there is a meticulous process of editing. This is not a slot for teaching grammar. The learners are sensitized on these errors by evoking their intuitive sense of well-formedness which works as a guiding indicator. Note that this sense is to be acquired non-consciously and not by learning grammatical facts consciously.

After the process of editing, children will refine their individual products with the help of the inputs they received and the ideal version of the discours. Finally, the teachers edits the children's version and gives a constructive feedback.

The post reading activities also include activities that make use of various study skills and those related to undertaking projects.

The Assessment

Language learning is a continuous process. Assessment is not an activity distinct from learning. Since learning is facilitated through group discussions, pair discussions and individually, assessment also operates at the individual level, in peers and in groups. This will help the learners to compare their strengths and weaknesses and make modifications in their learning. We propose Continuous and Comprehensive Assessment at all levels of language learning.

CCE is an attempt to shift from rote-learning to constructing knowledge and applying it as and when required. CCE is an ongoing process and is an integral part of the lesson. At every point of classroom transaction, we will have to assess what the child has learnt for which the same activities that are used for teaching / learning are used. The questions in the examination paper shall not simply be based on information given in the textbooks but shall create slots for the learner to use language in a meaningful way applying what she has learnt. So ‘mugging up’ by the student will not be of any use to him or her.

NCF 2005, SCF 2011 and RTE 2009 have emphasized the importance of implementing CCE where all assessments have to take place in a non-threatening atmosphere without causing any burden on the learners. The thrust is on formative aspects of learning instead of relying on a single paper-pencil test at the end of the academic year. Assessment has to take care of developing all the innate potential of the learners to the fullest extent.

The thrust is on the formative assessment which can be interpreted as assessment for learning and assessment as learning which are distinct from summative assessment of learning. It is important that the teacher does not judge the child’s nature, instead notices the inherent potential of the child as a learner in the context of his / her nature.

A truly professional teacher needs to be patient, innovative and assess his / her pupils’ progress in every period in each class and give proper feedback to each and every pupil so that language acquisition takes place in a smooth, natural and non-conscious manner.

Types of Assessment

There are two types of assessment. These are:

1. Formative Assessment,
2. Summative Assessment

Guidelines for Formative Assessment

Formative assessment is done based on four tools that cover all the language competencies (academic standards). These are:

1. Observation (children’s participation and responses during classroom transaction)
2. Written Work
3. Project Work
4. Slip Test

Teacher has to assess the performance of the learners for each term. This is not a single day activity; it is a cumulative account of what has happened in day- to-day class room transaction.

Criteria for awarding marks under each tool:

Observation: The oral performance of children related to classroom activities which cover the academic standards /learning outcomes (listening and speaking, reading comprehension and oral discourses) and their indicators should be considered while awarding marks.

Written Work: The written performance of children related to conventions of writing, vocabulary, grammar and written discourses should be considered (including the exercises in the textbook). Marks should be awarded based on the indicators.

Projects: The oral and written performance of children which cover all the academic standards / learning outcomes should be considered while awarding marks in various stages i.e. planning, execution, analysis and interpretation of data, report writing and presentation with feedback.

Slip Test: This test should be conducted without giving any prior notice to children. This test should cover the targeted discourses (by taking two / four targeted discourses in each formative assessment). This practice will help children in attempting the written discourses in Summative Tests successfully.

The following will provide the evidences for awarding marks in formative assessment:

- Teacher's unit cum period plan that reflect children's performance.
- Self - Assessment tools given in the TB for the use of learners.
- Student portfolio (Collection of the work done by the individual learner)
- Notebooks of children (written discourses and homework)
- Textual exercises carried out by children
- Products evolved in groups through collaboration
- Scripts of Slip Test

Summative Assessment

There will be a Summative Assessment after every term. The test is for 100 marks. Out of these, 20% of marks are allotted to oral test and 80% of marks are allotted for written test.

Under Oral test, 10% of marks are allotted to listening and speaking and remaining 10% of marks allotted to the targeted oral discourses under creative expression. The performance of children should be taken over a period of time but not on assessment day.

As CCE is a school based assessment, every school should prepare their own question papers for summative assessment.

The test items should not be discrete type items, but should be holistic. Hence narrative is the best tool to assess the children's performance in different domains of language. Narrative gaps should be provided where children can think and write a discourse under the given task. The chosen narrative should be at the comprehension level of the children's knowledge domain. The narratives should lead to different genres i.e., stories, letters, tables, pictorials, dialogues, advertisements.

Conventions of writing and Grammar should be assessed through the task of editing a discourse with errors and marks should be awarded accordingly.

Note: Teachers should refer to their Handbooks for comprehensive information to prepare the summative question papers.

The Plan

I. Year Plan

Class:

Subject: English

No. of Periods required:

Expected outcomes at the end of the year including Discourses targeted:

- 2.
- 3.

| Unit No. | Theme of the Unit | No. of Periods Required | Strategies and Activities | TLM / Resources Required | Month | Remarks |
|----------|-------------------|-------------------------|---------------------------|--------------------------|-------|---------|
| | | | | | | |

II. Unit cum Period Plan

Class:

Subject: English

1. Name of the unit:
2. No. of periods required: (this includes no. of periods required to transact all the reading passages and the activities given till the end of the unit)

3. Expected outcomes:

- i.
- ii.
- iii.

| Period | Description of content / Discourses / Activities | Strategy | Resource / TLM | Remarks |
|--------|--|----------|----------------|---------|
| | | | | |

4. Period wise notes and interactive questions:

5. Period wise reflections and notes on children's performance:

In an academic year, we get at least 180- 190 periods for teaching English. Since there are 8 units, each unit can be taught in 20 to 25 periods. You can further distribute these periods among the components of the unit. Here is an approximate scheme of work.

Each reading passage should be divided into meaningful segments. Each segment should be taught in three periods i.e., reading, discourse construction and editing. The teacher may skip the discourse construction and editing activities in case of non-availability of periods and less scope for discourse construction. But the teacher should ensure that all the targeted discourses of the class are practised three or four times in an academic year. The number of periods for each section can be increased or decreased based on the length of the reading passage. All the reading passages should be treated with equal importance in transactional process.

The tasks, given under oral activity and writing sections, should be treated as discourses and covered during the transaction of reading segments contextually (discourse construction and editing periods). Hence there is no need for separate periods for such activities.

Note: The teacher should read the entire unit thoroughly and identify the possible discourses. He /she should prepare a detailed unit cum period plan as per the table given above. He /she should prepare period wise interactive questions and other teaching points in advance. After completion of teaching, he / she has to note the reflections in the plan. The reflections should include the performance of children. Teachers should follow the transactional process suggested.

The same period plan can be used for successive years by adding more information if necessary.

Targeted discourses with indicators/ features

Conversations: contains dialogues with five to ten exchanges - proper sequence of exchanges - sustaining the conversation with social norms - discourse markers (well, precisely, etc.) - dialogues apt to the context - appropriate cohesive devices - voice modulation

Descriptions: description of objects/ things/persons creating vivid images - variety of sentence forms - proper sequence of the ideas - personal reflections on the event or person - appropriate cohesive devices.

Poems / Songs: suitable structural patterns. - rhyme scheme - specific patterns (rhythm / structure /metre / music / theme, etc.) - expressing emotions and reflections – use of images, thoughts and feelings - use of figures of speech - assonance and alliteration - point of view.

Narrative/Story: sequence of events and dialogues – evoking of sensory perceptions and emotions - images, setting and other details - use characterization – coherence - point of view

Diary: expression of personal reflections, thoughts and feelings – use of variety of sentences - use of language appropriate to the mood - self criticism and future plans - point of view- coherence

Letter: appropriate language to the context - appropriate format, layout and conventions – expressing ideas sequentially - use of persuasive language - maintaining coherence

Messages/e-mail/SMS: relevant ideas to the context – maintaining brevity – use of conventions, layout and format – appropriate language to the content and context.

Notice /Poster / Ads / Invitation: occasions and purposes showing the context details of venue, date, time, salutation, invitation, programme - persuasive language - organisation, layout and design – maintaining brevity – design and graphics – rhythm in language (for ads)

Slogans/Placards: appropriate to the context - maintaining brevity and rhythm

Play/Skit: dialogues relevant to the context with emotions and feelings - stage directions, movements and settings - dramatic conflict: beginning, rising actions and ending - reference to costumes and props – dramatisation - theatrical performance like dialogue delivery, actions, stage sense, costumes, etc..

Compering: arrangement of the programme sequentially as required by the context – presenting the background - highlighting the persons and the events - reviews and reflections relevant to the context – use of polite and entertaining expressions - following the conventions of the stage - use of spontaneous language in a lively manner – modulation of voice in an appealing way.

Choreography: identification of the main theme and stanza wise themes - bringing out a single and multiple themes - identification and sequences of actions of the protagonists (main characters) – identification and sequence of actions of the chorus - maintaining proper layout of script – performance of the actions of the protagonist and the chorus.

Essay (All types): title, introduction, thesis statement, body and conclusion - appropriate paragraphing with main ideas - supporting details and examples –organization of ideas and use of cohesive devices - maintaining coherence - point of view.

News report / Report: appropriate headline - lead sentence (five W's) - body of the news - organisation and use of cohesive devices – coherence - reporting style (reported speech, passivization, appropriate tense) - point of view Speech: making speeches /talks contextually - organisation of ideas – use of argumentative / persuasive / interactive language to substantiate views and ideas – use of discourse markers – citation of examples, quotations, etc - coherence, voice modulation and body language.

Review: stating the context of the review (story/novel/drama/essay/film) - highlighting and commenting on certain features of the item reviewed (e.g. characters/theme/setting / events/turning points etc.) – brevity - citation from the text to substantiate the point. (authenticity) - making personal impressions – maintaining coherence.

Debates and Discussions: expression of ideas as main points and sub points – presentation of arguments in a sequential order - citing suitable examples, quotations, and evidences – defending one's own point of view and rebutting opponent's point of view – use of discourse markers for agreeing, disagreeing, substantiating, enumerating, etc.. – use of polite expressions respecting other's views – use of logical and emotional appeals.

Biographical sketch/Profile/Autobiography: Details of the person - presentation of relevant ideas and information - organization of the data – interpretation of data and drawing inference - reflections, thoughts and feelings - anecdotes, events, achievements - point of view - organisation and the use of cohesive devices – maintaining coherence and flow.

NOTE: Use Teacher's Handbook for Effective Classroom Transaction and Continuing Professional Development.

Happy Teaching!
